“ Sustainability to me is using resources efficiently and minimizing waste. My vision for future cities would be cities that are not car-centric and encourage cleaner modes of transport such as cycling or walking. Minimizing coal-fired electricity and having ample green spaces would also be important features. ”

EXPERIENCE

Currently an economics intern with the Intergovernmental Relations team at the Victorian Department of Treasury and Finance, Nakshi assists in developing framework for qualitative analysis of Victoria's agreements with the Commonwealth government and researches solutions for how the Victorian government can nudge the private sector into providing affordable housing.
